STATEMENT OF INTEREST OF AMICI CURIAE

Saul Cornell is the Paul and Diane Guenther Chair in American History at Fordham University. One of the nation's leading authorities on early American constitutional thought, his work has been widely cited by legal scholars, historians, and the U.S Supreme Court and several state supreme courts. His first book, The Other Founders: Anti-Federalism and the Dissenting Tradition in America, 1788-1828 (1999) received the Society of the Cincinnati Book Prize. His second, A Well-Regulated Militia: The Founding Fathers and the Origins of Gun Control in America (2006), was awarded the Langum Prize for Historical Literature. He has written numerous essays for law reviews and historical journals on the origins and interpretation of the Second Amendment, and edited Whose Right to Bear Arms Did the Second Amendment Protect? (2000). Professor Cornell previously served as the Director of the Second Amendment Research Center, John Glenn School of Public Affairs, The Ohio State University (2002-2008). Professor Cornell was one of the amici before the U.S. Supreme Court in District of Columbia v. Heller and McDonald v. City of Chicago.

Alfred Brophy is the Judge John J. Parker Distinguished Professor of Law at the University of North Carolina School of Law. He has written extensively on race and property law in colonial, antebellum and early Twentieth Century America. Before entering teaching in 1994, he was a law clerk to Judge John Butzner of the United States Court of Appeals for the Fourth Circuit, practiced law with Skadden, Arps, Slate, Meagher & Flom in New York, and was a Mellon Fellow in the Humanities at Harvard University.

William J. Novak is a professor of law at the University of Michigan Law School. A specialist on the legal, political, and intellectual history of the United States, he is the author of The People's Welfare: Law and Regulation in Nineteenth-Century America, which won the American Historical Association's Littleton-Griswold Prize and was named Best Book in the History of Law and Society. Professor Novak was one of the amici before the U.S. Supreme Court in District of Columbia v. Heller and McDonald v. City of Chicago.

Paul Finkelman is the President William McKinley Distinguished Professor of Law at Albany Law School. An expert in constitutional history and constitutional law, he is the author of more than 150 scholarly articles and more than 30 books. He has written extensively on Thomas Jefferson, and his scholarship on the Second Amendment has been cited by the Supreme Court. In 2008 he was listed as one of ten most cited legal historians teaching in law schools. In 2009 he was elected as a member of the American Antiquarian Society. Professor Finkelman was one of the amici before the U.S. Supreme Court in McDonald v. City of Chicago.

SUMMARY OF ARGUMENT

As this Court has recognized: “historical meaning enjoys a privileged interpretative role in the Second Amendment context.”¹ However, reliance on legal scholars over historians can result in inaccurate historical conclusions – a “lawyer’s history,” rather than a historian’s.² Hence, amici offer a historian’s expert perspective to assist the Court in evaluating the complex and contradictory historical evidence, and in separating historical myths from historical realities.

The court below relied extensively on the concurring opinion of Judge Niemeyer in United States v. Masciandaro, 638 F.3d 458 (4th Cir. 2011), which concluded that: “Consistent with the historical understanding of the right to keep and bear arms outside the home, the Heller Court’s description of its actual holding also implies that a broader right exists.”³ However, when one examines the relevant history – including new historical research that was not available when Masciandaro was decided – it becomes clear that Judge Niemeyer’s conclusion rests on a number of common historical misconceptions. Founding era beliefs and practices indicate that the need for self-defense in the home implies nothing about the existence of a right outside the home. The historical record is replete with examples of limitations of the right to use firearms outside of one's home.

Self-defense beyond the home implicates far broader questions of public safety, and the historical record indicates that the Founding generation decided to leave the resolution of regulating public carrying to the more flexible standards afforded by the common law and the public policy preferences of individual legislatures. The fact that weapons were needed to maintain training and hunting also has little bearing on how these weapons might be used outside of the home because pistols were not typically part of the standard weapons of the militia. In some states even traveling to muster was tightly regulated and weapons were required to be unloaded.⁴

A. The Scope of the Right to Bear Arms in Founding Era

While Americans may well have believed they had a legal right to defend their homes with deadly force if necessary, there is no evidence that members of the Founding era thought it was necessary to constitutionalize the protection of this right outside of the home.⁵ Balancing the needs of public safety against the exercise of this right was something best left to the individual state legislatures. Clear statements about the need to limit the right to keep and bear arms to one's home or property are found both in Virginia – in particular the views of Thomas Jefferson – and in Massachusetts.

⁴ See infra note 14.

1. Virginia and Thomas Jefferson: No Recognition of A Right Outside One's Own Property

Virginia was the first state to draft a new Constitution and Declaration of Rights. George Mason, the primary architect of the Virginia Declaration of Rights, had been a leading patriot and took a major role in the creation of the new state's militia. The language eventually adopted by Virginia stated:

That a well regulated militia, composed of the body of the people, trained to arms, is the proper, natural, and safe defence of a free state; that standing armies, in time of peace, should be avoided, as dangerous to liberty; and that, in all cases, the military should be under strict subordination to, and governed by, the civil power.⁶

Virginia's Declaration of Rights made no mention of the right to bear arms or a right of self-defense. The absence of such language did not mean that Virginians did not esteem the right of self-defense; it merely underscored the fact that they believed such a right was adequately protected under the common law.

The militia focus of Mason's language troubled Thomas Jefferson, one of the most forward-looking and innovative legal thinkers in the Old Dominion.

⁶ Virginia Declaration of Rights, PAPERS OF GEORGE MASON, 1: 288.

Jefferson proposed his own alternative to Mason's language, which included a more expansive statement of the right of individuals to keep and use firearms.

Jefferson first proposed that "no free man shall ever be debarred the use of arms," but decided to revise his proposal to limit the exercise of this right to an individual's home or lands. His revised proposal, which was not enacted, suggested that the Virginia Declaration of Rights include language asserting that "no free man shall be debarred the use of arms [within his own lands or tenements]." ⁷

Elsewhere Jefferson evidenced his view that firearms rights did not extend beyond one's property. In a bill he wrote to deal with poaching, Jefferson included a provision restricting the ability to travel armed with a musket outside of the context of militia activity. The proposed law penalized any individual who "bear[s] a gun out of his enclosed ground, unless whilst performing military duty."

⁸ The purpose of the statute was to legally distinguish between the different levels of regulation appropriate to the use of firearms in different contexts. In public, militia weapons enjoyed legal protection. By contrast, the civilian use of guns outside of the home was subject to greater regulation.

2. Massachusetts: No Right To Travel Armed Recognized

Massachusetts was the first state to introduce language that expressly protected a right to keep and bear arms. The 1780 Constitution adopted by the state declared that:

The People have a right to keep and bear arms for the common defense. And as in time of peace armies are dangerous to liberty they ought not to be maintained without the consent of the legislature; and the military power shall always be held in exact subordination to the civil authority and be governed by it.⁹

The convention's inclusion of the word "keep" built on an assumption implicit in the state's militia statute, which had been enacted in the colonial era. Apart from the poor, most white male citizens were required to outfit themselves with military quality weapons. As was true for virtually every state's militia laws, muskets, not pistols, were the legally designated weapon of the militia. The only exception to this was the horsemen's pistol required for dragoons and other mounted units.¹⁰

⁹ Article XVII Constitution of 1780, in THE POPULAR SOURCES OF POLITICAL AUTHORITY 446 (Oscar Handlin and Mary Handlin, eds., 1966).

¹⁰ See Saul CORNELL, A WELL REGULATED MILITIA: THE FOUNDING FATHERS AND THE ORIGINS OF GUN CONTROL IN AMERICA (2006). For an example from the Second Amendment era, see An Act for Regulating and Governing the Militia of the Commonwealth of Massachusetts, in ACTS AND LAWS, PASSED BY THE GENERAL COURT OF MASSACHUSETTS 294 (1793).

One of the most remarkable features of the framing and ratification of the Massachusetts Constitution was the decision to submit the draft constitution to the towns for comments. These responses provide a rare glimpse into popular constitutional ideas in the Founding era, including ideas about armed self-defense. Although individual towns produced dozens of detailed responses to the proposed constitution, the clause on the right to keep and bear arms did not prompt extensive commentary. The response of the western town Williamsburgh, however, did fault the constitution's exclusive focus on common defense and proposed the following alternative:

1st. that we esteem it an essential privilege to keep Arms in our houses for Our Own Defense and while we Continue honest and Lawfull Subjects of Government we Ought Never to be deprived of them.¹¹

(emphasis added). This alternative formulation clearly frames the right in terms similar to Heller's core right of self -defense in the home.

This limited formulation of the right was also evidenced in the language chosen by Samuel Adams in his proposed amendment submitted to, but ultimately rejected by, the Massachusetts convention.¹²

B. Recognition of A Private Right To Bear Arms Outside One's Property Relies on Myths, Rather Than Historical Realities, of Gun Regulation in the Founding Era and Early Republic

In Maschiandaro, Judge Niemeyer reasoned that the right protected by Heller had to extend beyond the home, because of the need to hunt and participate in the militia.¹³ However, while Judge Niemeyer extrapolated a right to carry firearms from an unquestioned historical assumption about the way the militia functioned, in fact, states regulated the exercise of this right in a robust manner, including prohibiting militiamen from traveling with an armed weapon to muster or parade.¹⁴ These types of regulations were an uncontroversial exercise of the state's police powers.¹⁵ As Jefferson's proposed statute suggests, the use of militia weapons outside of the home was treated far differently than the use of pistols for non-militia purposes. Indeed, the Founding generation had little trouble accepting that one might have different legal standards for the use of arms within the home and in public.

DOCUMENTS, LEGISLATIVE AND EXECUTIVE OF THE CONGRESS OF THE UNITED STATES . . . CLASS V. MILITARY AFFAIRS (1832) at 451-52.

¹⁵ WILLIAM J. NOVAK, THE PEOPLE'S WELFARE: LAW AND REGULATION IN NINETEENTH-CENTURY AMERICA 51-82 (1996).

Although there were hundreds of essays published both for and against the Constitution, the subject of hunting and the right of self-defense outside the home produced little commentary.¹⁶ There is strong evidence that Federalists and Anti-Federalists each saw these issues as matters best left to the state legislatures. For example, while Federalist Tench Coxe and the Anti-Federalist author Brutus agreed on few things, they were in complete agreement that “it ought to be left to the state governments to provide for the protection and defence of the citizen against the hand of private violence, and the wrongs done or attempted by individuals to each other”¹⁷

Further, militia weapons were granted far greater legal protection than non-militia weapons. Although state laws varied, a number of states expressly provided that weapons owned in relation to militia service were exempt from seizure in any legal proceedings for debt or delinquent taxes. For example, a Philadelphia guidebook for justices of the peace, sheriffs, and constables, in discussing goods subject to a “distress for rent” action, noted that while tradesmen’s tools were exempt, no provision was made for firearms, apart from muskets and rifles owned by militiamen.¹⁸ Similarly, in a guide written for sheriffs and tax collectors in Maine, published more than three decades later, militia firearms were exempt.¹⁹

Given the language of the Second Amendment, the notion that the use of militia weapons outside of the home enjoyed greater protection than the use of pistols outside of the home makes perfect sense. Although Heller held that self-defense in the home was one core value enshrined in the Second Amendment, it is hard to dispute that the Amendment also protects the goal of arming the militia. Since pistols had little value in hunting, and were not standard equipment for ordinary militia men, it made sense to carve out a broader right to travel with a musket or a rifle as these weapons were needed for training and were suitable for hunting. Yet, even this right was subject to extensive regulation and limitation.

Finally, the common law constrained the use of firearms outside of one's property in the Founding era and early republic. The Statute of Northampton (1328) instructed individuals to “bring no force in affray of the peace, nor to go ride armed by night nor by day, in fairs, markets.”²⁰ Modern scholars are divided over how to interpret the application of this statute in early American law. In the view of Daryl Miller and Patrick Charles, the Statute of Northampton (1328) prohibited armed travel.²¹ Eugene Volokh, a leading academic champion of gun rights, argues that this “statute was understood by the Framers as covering only those circumstances where carrying arms was unusual and therefore terrifying.”²² Volokh cites the interpretation of this statute by Sir William Hawkins, an English legal commentator familiar to lawyers in the Founding era, who read the prohibition in terms of traveling with “unusual and dangerous weapons.”

The interpretation of the Statute of Northampton by Volokh and Sir Hawkins is subtly different than that of Sir William Blackstone.²³ Blackstone did not describe the crime of affray in terms of traveling with “unusual and dangerous weapons,” but described the statute’s prohibition in terms of carrying “dangerous or unusual weapons.”²⁴ The Founders were familiar with both English commentators and it seems likely that there may have been a range of views on interpreting this question.

The Heller Court relied on Blackstone in discussing permissible limitations on the right. Heller, 554 U.S. at 627. The Heller Court also referred approvingly to the “historical tradition” of prohibiting public carrying, citing English v. State, 35 Tex. 473 (1871) (see Heller, 554 U.S. at 627), in which the Texas Supreme Court upheld a conviction for carrying a pistol in public under a statute banning the public carry of deadly weapons, including handguns.

The historical record supports this traditionally understood limitation of the right. After all, Founding era public policy on firearms had several objectives: to disarm dangerous and disloyal groups, provide for the safe storage of gun powder and firearms, and arm and regulate the militia.²⁵ In the Founding era, interpersonal violence – including gun violence – was simply not a problem that warranted enough attention to produce legislation.²⁶ When cheaper, more reliable and more concealable weapons became more common in the early 19th century, legislatures responded with greater restrictions and prohibitions on their public carrying, as will be discussed below.

C. The Historical Conclusions and Antebellum Case Law Relied On By Judge Niemeyer Do Not Support A Right Outside One's Property

As cheaper and more reliable handguns began to proliferate in large numbers and society underwent a host of profound social and economic changes in the early decades of the nineteenth century, handguns and knives gradually became a social problem. In response to a growing perception that these easily concealable weapons posed a serious threat to public safety, a number of states passed the first modern style weapons control laws.²⁷ These laws triggered the first cases testing the scope of the constitutional right to keep and bear arms under state law.²⁸ For the first time in American history, courts were faced with deciding this issue: was the constitutional right to bear arms implicated when one armed oneself with a pistol or a knife outside of the home?

In Masciandaro, Judge Niemeyer relied on law Professor Volokh's answer to that question for considering Heller's applicability outside the home. Unfortunately, this framework rests on a number of historical assumptions and claims that are questionable at best, inaccurate at worst. In particular, the contention that the “pre-Civil-War American legal practice of treating open carrying of weapons as not only legal but constitutionally protected”²⁹ rests more on historical mythology and a highly selective reading of the evidence than it does on sound historical research. In reality, significant antebellum case law on the right to bear arms, such as State v. Buzzard, 4 Ark. 18, 21 (1842), limited the right to travel armed, although a few outlier decisions embraced a broader, more libertarian view, as in Bliss v. Commonwealth, 12 Ky. 90 (1822). Most legal commentators in the era of the Fourteenth Amendment viewed Buzzard, not Bliss, as the orthodox view – indeed, even in Kentucky, the people superseded Bliss by amendment.³⁰

Mischaracterizing the antebellum jurisprudence is not the only problem with Volokh’s gun rights version of history. Volokh is a legal scholar, not a historian, and as such he is best trained to deal with doctrinal analysis, relying mostly on case law. However, in matters where there was a broad constitutional consensus and laws were not challenged, there would not be a body of case law. Much legal scholarship on the right to bear arms, including Volokh's work, strikingly omits any attention to the legal standards outside of the South.³¹

It is not surprising that the vast majority of the early cases testing the limits and scope of the right to bear arms came from the South. By the 1820s the antebellum South was the most violent region in the new nation.³² As the South's homicide rates were more than double that of the North's most populous cities, New York and Philadelphia, it is not surprising that this region led the way in passing the first modern style gun control laws. These new laws generated the first test cases of the meaning of the right to bear arms under state constitutional law.

If one looks closely at the foundation for Professor Volokh's claim about the right to carry, it consists of a single and quite remarkable statement by a Richmond grand jury published in 1820, in which the grand jury denounced the pernicious practice of carrying concealed weapons, while affirming the right to carry ³¹ Nearly all of the antebellum gun cases were decided in the South, and the most important counter examples are a trio of Indiana cases that may in part be accounted for by Southern migration into Indiana. *State v. arms³³ – hardly the sort of historical evidence that could support his broad Constitutional conclusion.

The idea that one might ban concealed carry only if one allowed open carry garners some support in the Supreme Court of Georgia's decision in Nunn v. State, 1 Ga. 243, 246 (1846). But even Nunn's holding may not be as broad as some suggest, as the Court also was troubled that under the challenged law "[i]t might be insisted, and with much plausibility, that even sheriffs, and other officers therein enumerated, might be convicted for keeping, as well as carrying, any of the forbidden weapons, while not in the actual discharge of their respective duties."³⁴ Further, not only are the pro-slavery views of Nunn's author, Judge Lumpkin, anathema today, but there is little evidence that this case was understood to be a controlling precedent even in the South.³⁵ See, e.g., Aymette v. State, 21 Tenn. 154, 159-61 (1840) ("The Legislature, therefore, have a right to prohibit the wearing or keeping weapons dangerous to the peace and safety of the citizens, and which are not usual in civilized warfare, or would not contribute to the common defence.”); State v. Buzzard, 4 Ark. 18, 21 (1842); State v. Jumel, 13 La. Ann. 399, 400 (1858). Indeed, Nunn did not even represent the view of the Supreme Court of Georgia for long. In Hill v. State, 53 Ga. 472, 474 (1874), that Court was “at a loss to follow the line of thought that extends the guarantee”—the state constitutional “right of the people to keep and bear arms” – “to the right to carry pistols, dirks, Bowie-knives, and those other weapons of like character, which, as all admit, are the greatest nuisances of our day.”

In a post-Civil War case relied on by the Heller Court, the Supreme Court of Texas, in English v. State, relied on centuries-old traditions of prohibiting arms in public places and found it “little short of ridiculous, that any one should claim the right to carry upon his person any of the mischievous devices inhibited by the statute, into a peaceable public assembly, as, for instance into a church . . . or any other place where ladies and gentlemen are congregated together.” 35 Tex. 473, 478-79 (1871). Numerous other courts similarly found that prohibitions or extensive restrictions on the carrying of firearms in public were constitutionally permissible. See, e.g., Fife v. State, 31 Ark. 455 (1876) (upholding carrying prohibition as a lawful “exercise of the police power of the State without any infringement of the constitutional right” to bear arms); State v. Workman, 35 W. Va. 367, 373 (1891); Ex parte Thomas, 97 P. 260, 262 (Okla. 1908) (“Practically all of the states under constitutional provisions similar to ours have held that acts of the Legislatures against the carrying of weapons concealed did not conflict with such constitutional provision denying infringement of the right to bear arms, but were a valid exercise of the police power of the state.”). The idea that Americans recognized a right to carry firearms in public is more supported by Hollywood than history; even in Dodge City, that epitome of the Wild West, Wyatt Earp prohibited gun carrying. See Dodge City, Kan., Ordinance No. 16, § XI (Sept. 22, 1876); see also 1876 Wyo. Comp. Laws ch. 52, § 1 (1876 Wyoming law prohibiting anyone from “bear[ing] upon his person, concealed or openly, any firearm or other deadly weapon, within the limits of any city, town or village”); Ark. Act of Apr. 1, 1881; Tex. Act of Apr. 12, 1871.

Nunn clearly had no impact on practices in the North and much of the Mid-West and West – though much scholarship on the right to bear arms has been strangely silent about legal ideas and practices in these other areas of the nation, which included the vast majority of the free population. Evidence from these regions supports an alternative model of the right to carry, one narrowly limited to situations where there was a reasonable cause to fear imminent violence.

Outside of the South, the model of regulation that emerged and gained widespread acceptance allowed for banning the open and concealed carry of handguns and other weapons, as long as one allowed an exception for cases in which an individual had a reasonable fear of violence. In 1836, Massachusetts passed a sweeping law that severely limited the right to travel armed:

If any person shall go armed with a dirk, dagger, sword, pistol, or other offensive and dangerous weapon, without reasonable cause to fear an assault or other injury, or violence to his person, or to his family or property, he may on complaint of any person having reasonable cause to fear an injury, or breach of the peace, be required to find sureties for keeping the peace.³⁶

The respected jurist Peter Oxenbridge Thatcher commented on this law in a grand jury charge that drew praise in the contemporary press. Thatcher shared the dominant cultural view of the day that the practice of arming oneself with concealed weapons was craven, if not dastardly. The alternative to concealed carry, however, was not open carry, but rigorous enforcement of the law, which forbade arming oneself except in unusual situations:

In our own Commonwealth [of Massachusetts], no person may go armed with a dirk, dagger, sword, pistol, or other offensive and dangerous weapon, without reasonable cause to apprehend an assault or violence to his person, family, or property. Where the practice of wearing secret arms prevails, it indicates either that the laws are bad; or that they are not executed with vigor; or, at least, it proves want of confidence in their protection. It often leads to the sudden commission of acts of atrocious injury; and induces the individual to rely for defense on himself, rather than on society. But how vain and impotent is the power of a single arm, however skilled in the science of defense, to protect its possessor from the many evil persons who infest society. The possession of a concealed dagger is apt to produce an elation of mind, which raises itself about the dictates both of prudence and law. The possessor, stimulated by a sensitive notion of honor, and constituting himself the sole judge of his rights, may suddenly commit a deed; for which a life of penitence will hardly, even in his own estimation, atone. When you survey the society to which you belong, and consider the various wants of its members;—their numbers, their variety of occupation and character,—their conflicting interests and wants . . . what is it, permit me to ask, preserves the common peace and safety? I know of no answer, but THE LAW.³⁷

(Emphasis added). Thatcher describes a narrowly defined right to carry arms in public. According to this view, the state may ban all carrying of firearms as long as it acknowledged a legal exception when there was a clear and tangible danger which would warrant arming oneself.

By the dawn of the era of the Fourteenth Amendment, this narrow conception of the right to carry had emerged clearly in Maine, Delaware, the District of Columbia, Wisconsin, Pennsylvania, Minnesota, and Oregon.³⁸ Rather one might legally arm oneself³⁹ – a standard similar to that embodied in the Maryland law at issue here.

The idea that courts would use the Fourteenth Amendment to incorporate an isolated strand of the slave South's legal vision to recognize a right to public carry turns history on its head. The relevant sources that one might plausibly consult to establish the original meaning or understanding of the Fourteenth Amendment – including Framers, ratifiers, the typical informed reader, or the public at large – would have embraced the more common Massachusetts model, not the exceptional Southern one.⁴⁰ Indeed, Reconstruction era Republicans were strong supporters of generally applicable and racially neutral gun regulations, including in some cases, bans on traveling armed and bans on handguns.⁴¹

³⁹ These statutes acknowledged a common law exception by allowing individuals to arm themselves in cases of imminent danger, and relied on a common law enforcement mechanism, surety of peace. In an age before modern police forces, when most Americans lived in smaller rural communities, and there was no modern regulatory or administrative state, adopting this common law approach would have seemed quite natural. See HAMMOND, A PRACTICAL TREATISE, supra note 37; NOVAK, THE PEOPLE'S WELFARE, supra note 15.

⁴¹ Carole Emberton, The Limits of Incorporation: Violence, Gun Rights, and Gun Regulation in the Reconstruction South, 17 STAN. L. & POL'Y REV. 615 (2006). While modern gun rights advocates have attempted to portray Reconstruction era Republicans as radical gun rights advocates, the historical reality is far more

The importance of the reasonable threat exception to broad restrictions on the public carrying of arms was analyzed by the eminent jurist, John Foster Dillon, and by another celebrated legal theorist of this era, Joel Prentiss Bishop.⁴² Both men acknowledged that the law had to balance the legitimate rights of individual self-defense against the needs of public safety. Dillon's discussion of this issue was especially thoughtful. Drawing on the recently – decided Andrews v. State, 50 Tenn. 165, 188 (1871), Dillon concluded that “every good citizen is bound to yield his preference as to the means [of self-defense] to be used, to the demands of the public good.”⁴³ The state's compelling interest in promoting public safety did not alter the fact that there “are circumstances under which to disarm a citizen would complex. Abolitionists were divided over the legitimacy of armed self-defense. Antebellum abolitionism existed along a spectrum that ran from John Brown's insurrectionary theory to Quaker pacifism. Reconstruction era Republicans were also heirs to the antebellum Whig ideal of the well regulated state. For additional evidence of Reconstruction era support for racially neutral gun regulations intended to promote public safety, see Cornell & Florence, supra note 30.

⁴² Volokh, supra note 29; Judge Niemeyer and Judge Legg in the Fourth Circuit may have erred in putting too much faith in Volokh's version of the past, see Judge Niemeyer's concurrence in United States v. Masciandaro, and Judge Legg's opinion in Woollard v. Sheridan, F. Supp. 2d., 2012 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 28498 (D. Md. March 2, 2012).

be to leave his life at the mercy of treacherous and plotting enemy.”⁴⁴ Dillon’s solution to this dilemma was not permissive open carry. He turned to a common law rule that had been absorbed into the Massachusetts statute prohibiting traveling armed. If one armed oneself contrary to a legal prohibition and a genuine threat existed, and “if such a state of facts were clearly proven,” he opined, it would “clearly be said to fall within that class of cases in which the previously existing common law interpolates exceptions upon subsequently enacted statutes.”⁴⁵

The claim that there was a broad consensus in American law on a right to carry firearms openly is incorrect, and mistakenly extrapolates from one distinctive strain within Southern law, while ignoring the more dominant contrary authority, in the South and elsewhere.

CONCLUSION

The proposition that the Founding era understood the right of self-defense to include a constitutionally protected right to travel armed with a pistol is not supported by the best historical evidence. And there is no merit in the proposition that, by the era of the Fourteenth Amendment, the right to carry firearms openly had gained widespread acceptance in American law. The right to keep and bear

THE STATE OF CONNECTICUT against JOSEPH E. HUNGERFORD.

[NO NUMBER IN ORIGINAL]

SUPREME COURT OF ERRORS OF CONNECTICUT

4 Day 383; 1810 Conn. LEXIS 29

June, 1810, Decided

PRIOR HISTORY: [1] WRIT of error.

This was an information by a grand juror against Hungerford, on the statute tit. 112. c. 6. s. 1. for discharging a musket, on a day of company exercise and review, without the order of a commissioned officer.

The information alleged that Hungerford was a soldier in the 6th company of the 35th regiment of Connecticut militia; that on the 5th day of September, 1808, which was a day of military exercise for said company, he appeared, by order of the captain, at the usual place of parade, and performed the exercises of the day, agreeably to the orders of the captain; and that after he had served in said company as aforesaid, and after he was duly dismissed, by the commanding officer of said company, from any further military services on said day, and before the going down of the sun, on or near the parade of said company, without any orders, or being commanded by any commissioned officer of said company, he discharged his musket, which was loaded with powder.

The section of the act on which the information was founded is as follows: "That if any person or persons, belonging to either of the militia companies in this state, shall fire any field-piece, or [2] discharge his musket or pistol, or suffer the same to be done by others, on any regimental, battalion, or company days of exercise, or review, excepting by order of a commissioned officer, he shall, for each offence, forfeit and pay a fine of four dollars, to be recovered by bill, plaint or information thereof made, and conviction had, before any proper court to try the same, for the use and benefit of him who shall prosecute the same to effect."

On the trial before the county court, the witnesses in behalf of the state testified, that Hungerford discharged his musket on the day mentioned in the information, after the company was dismissed for the day; and this was the only firing proved. The defendant then offered witnesses to prove, that after the company was dismissed, the captain ordered him to discharge his musket; to which the attorney for the state objected. The court decided that the defendant could not by law introduce that testimony, or any other, to prove any order, direction or permission of the captain, after the company was dismissed for the day.

The defendant was found guilty. He then filed his bill of exceptions to the decision of the court above stated, and [3] brought a writ of error. The superior court reversed the judgment of the county court. The attorney for the state then brought the present writ of error, assigning the general errors.

DISPOSITION: Judgment affirmed.

CASE SUMMARY:

PROCEDURAL POSTURE: Defendant militia member was charged with discharging a musket, after company exercise and review, without a commissioned officer's order. The case was tried in county court (Connecticut), where the State presented its witnesses. Defendant offered witnesses to prove that the captain ordered him to discharge his musket. The trial court sustained the State's objection to such testimony and defendant was found guilty. He sought appellate review.

4 Day 383, *; 1810 Conn. LEXIS 29, **

OVERVIEW: The militia member contended that he had discharged his musket upon the direct order of the commissioned captain of his militia company. The court held that discharging a musket at any time was not a crime at common law, but became a crime only in cases where it was prohibited by law. The court held that firing a musket by the order and direction of a commissioned officer, during any time in the day, was not a firing without orders, and could not constitute the offence charged in the information, and which was prohibited by statute. The court held that the testimony offered by defendant was proper and relevant on the issue, and should have been admitted before the trial court.

OUTCOME: The court affirmed the trial court's judgment.

CORE TERMS: musket, commissioned officer, militia, captain, firing

[HN1] Merely to discharge a musket at any time is no crime at common law; it becomes an offence in those cases only in which it is prohibited by statute.

HEADNOTES

It is not an offence within the stat. tit. 112. c. 6. s. 1. for a soldier to discharge a musket on a day of company exercise and review, by order of a commissioned officer, after the company are dismissed for the day.

COUNSEL: Hosmer, for the plaintiff in error. The general question arising on this record is, whether the order stated in the bill of exceptions, given after the company was dismissed for the day, was an order within the exception of the statute?

1. An order is an authoritative mandate, making obedience a duty. Advice, permission, or direction, is not an order; because it leaves the person to whom it is addressed at liberty to comply with it or not. The term frequently occurs in the militia act; and is invariably used in this imperative sense. Tit. 112. c. 1. s. 12, 13, 14, 18, 19, 26, 27. This is not only the legal import of the term, but its ordinary acceptance. Those only who can coerce obedience are said to give orders.
2. After a company is dismissed for the day, the authority of the captain is terminated. He then becomes a private citizen. When the captain in this case issued the order in question, he was a citizen only, and had no command; the defendant was a citizen [4] also, and owed no obedience. Dismission, ex vi termini, is a discharge from military duty. If the defendant had refused to obey this order of the captain to discharge his musket, could he be punished for disobedience? This is the test.
3. There is no room for construction in this case. Whatever the reason giving birth to the statute was, the object of the legislature is clearly expressed, and the line is defined. It was not thought necessary to trust in the discretion of military officers after dismission of their companies; and no such discretion is given.

Daggett and C. Whittelsey, for the defendant in error. The statute prohibits the firing of a musket on any day of company exercise; immediately after which follows the exception in these words: "Excepting by order of a commissioned officer." The exception is coextensive with the prohibiting clause, so that if the statute prohibits firing after the company are dismissed, a firing by order of a commissioned officer, at that time, is excepted. The mischief which existed under the old law, was the irregular firing of soldiers on the morning of training day, while they were on the parade, and while returning home, by which [5] the peace was disturbed, and the lives of themselves and others endangered. This mischief it was thought best to guard against; but it was sufficient to subject all firing on that day to the discretion of the military officers. These are men appointed by the legislature, in whom special confidence is reposed. The court will not limit their powers by construction farther than is necessary to restrain the mischief. It is very necessary that they should have the power to order soldiers to discharge their pieces, which happen to be loaded after the company are dismissed. The militia law requires soldiers to be furnished with ball cartridges; their muskets may be charged with these; and if the officers had not power to order them to be discharged, except on parade, very serious injury might be done.

The statute is silent as to the place of firing; but it would not suppress the mischief to restrict the prohibition to the parade ground. Whenever power is given by statute for a certain purpose, so much power is given necessarily as is requisite to effect that purpose. In Avery v. Bulkley, 1 Root, 275. it was decided, that the officer had authority over his soldiers while they were going [6] to the place of review. [SWIFT, J. In the report of that case the facts are not correctly stated.] Further, it does not appear in this case, that the firing was not on the parade ground.

The defendant is charged with a crime, not at common law, but made so by statute, with an exception in favour of those who act under the order of a commissioned officer. The defendant did act by the order of a commissioned officer. Can this court say that the officer could not give the order? This is a question exclusively of military cognisance. If the person whose conduct is called in question is a military subject, a court of law cannot interfere.

JUDGES: TRUMBULL, J. The other judges severally concurred in this opinion.

OPINION BY: TRUMBULL

[*386] TRUMBULL, J. [HN1] Merely to discharge a musket at any time is no crime at common law; it becomes an offence in those cases only in which it is prohibited by statute.

The statute enacts, "that if any person or persons belonging to either of the militia companies in this state, [*387] shall fire any field-piece, or discharge his musket or pistol, or suffer the same to be done by others, on any regimental, battalion, or company days of exercise, excepting [7] by order of a commissioned officer, he shall, for each offence, forfeit and pay a fine of four dollars."

By the bill of exceptions, it appears that Hungerford offered witnesses to prove that after said company was dismissed on said day, the commissioned captain of said company ordered and directed him to discharge and fire his said musket; and on objection, the county court decided that he could not by law introduce said testimony, nor any testimony to prove any order, direction, or permission of said captain after the company was dismissed for the day; and said testimony was not admitted.

It is urged by the counsel for the state, that on a field day, an officer has no military command after the company is dismissed from the ground, and that his orders, having then no force or authority, cannot avail to excuse the delinquent.

What command an officer of militia on a day of review has over his men after his company is dismissed, and what power he may have to enforce any particular orders he may issue, are points not necessary to be investigated in the determination of this case. Firing by the order and direction of a commissioned officer, during any time in the day, is not a firing [8] without orders, and cannot constitute the offence charged in the information, and prohibited by the statute.

The testimony offered was proper and relevant on the issue, and ought to have been admitted before the county court.

The other judges severally concurred in this opinion.

Judgment affirmed.

DUTY OF THE CONSTABLE ON EXECUTIONS.

1. Of proceedings against the goods and chattels.
2. Of proceedings against the body.

1. Proceedings against the goods and chattels.

Of the levy and inventory.] On receiving the execution, it is the duty of the constable immediately to make a note on the execution of the time of receiving it, and to make a levy, without delay, upon the defendant's goods and chattels, and make out an inventory of so much as he levies upon, with the time of making the same, and sign his name to such levy and inventory, and annex them to the execution, and the property is bound from the time of making the levy. Rev. L. 636.

Of advertising and sale.] The constable, having made his levy, is to give notice, by advertisements signed by himself, and put up in three of the most public places in the township where they were taken, of the time and place when and where they will be exposed to sale, at least five days before the sale. Id.

The advertisements must describe the goods and chattels to be sold. Rev. L. 636. The most advisable course is, to attach an inventory to the advertisement.

At the time and place so appointed, the constable is to expose them to sale by public vendue, and strike them off to the highest bidder.

Of the proceeds of sale.] The constable is to pay the moneys arising from the sale to the plaintiff, or, in his absence, to the justice, until the plaintiff's demand is satisfied. Rev. L. 637.

If there be a surplus, and there be no execution on the property, he may pay the surplus to the defendant. If there be other executions on the goods, he is to dispose of the surplus according to the manner before directed. See priority of executions, p. 65.

Of the return of the execution.] Within thirty days from the time of receiving it, he is to make return to the justice who issued it of his proceedings, and the justice is to make a record thereof. Rev. L. 637.

Of the property not liable to execution.] One bed and bedding, and one cow, if the debtor have a family, are reserved for their use, and cannot be taken. Rev. L. 637. Also the arms and accoutrements of a militiaman cannot be taken in execution. Rev. L. 589.

CHAP. XV.]

PARTICULAR WORDS AND PHRASES.

§ 337*

sword is not drawn or the pistol not pointed.¹ And a pistol may be regarded as a dangerous weapon, even without proof of its having been loaded.²

§ 336. Loaded Arms. A pistol loaded with gunpowder and ball, yet having its touch-hole so plugged that it cannot possibly be fired, is not "loaded arms" within the English statute of 9 Geo. 4, c. 31, § 11 and 12;³ the words of which are, — "shall, by drawing a trigger, or in any other manner, attempt to discharge any kind of loaded arms at any person." And where one sent to another a tin box, with three pounds of gunpowder in it, and two detonators to ignite the gunpowder when the box should be opened, intending to destroy the person opening the box, — the court held, that this was not an attempt to discharge loaded arms at him.⁴

§ 337. Offensive Weapon. These words occur in several present and repealed English statutes, which forbid the doing of certain things, "armed with fire-arms or other offensive arms or weapons,"⁵ "carrying offensive arms or weapons,"⁶ "with an offensive weapon or instrument,"⁷ and other like expressions. No exact definition has been given to the words "offensive weapon"; yet they are understood to include, not only guns, pistols, daggers, and instruments of war; together with bludgeons, properly so called, clubs, and other things used only as weapons;⁸ but also heavy walking-sticks, crutches, and the like, which latter are deemed offensive weapons or not, according to the intent with which the person uses or carries them.⁹ On the other hand, a common horsewhip;¹⁰ bats, being long poles employed by smugglers with which to convey away tubs of spirits;¹¹ and large sticks, some three feet long, with knobs at the ends, and with some prongs, the natural growth of the timber;¹² have severally been held not to be offensive weapons: the impression indeed seems to have prevailed, that, to be offensive, they must be what the law calls dangerous.¹³ is required. Thus, sending a challenge, either verbal or written, to fight a duel;¹ going about armed, with unusual and dangerous weapons, to the terror of the people;² riotously driving in a carriage through the streets of a populous city, so as to hazard the safety of the inhabitants;³ spreading false news;⁴ publishing libels;⁵ even in some extreme cases uttering words⁶ calculated to stir up resentments and quarrels; eavesdropping;⁷ being a common scold;⁸ and the like; are cognizable criminally by the common law. For we have seen, that every man is presumed to intend the natural and even probable consequences of his act; also, that usually, if one attempts unsuccessfully to do a criminal thing, — intending to do it, and performing an act toward the doing, — he is indictable therefor.⁹

§ 981. We have also that triangle of analogous offences, barratry, maintenance, and champerty; which are rather actual than attempted disturbances of the repose of the community. The gist of them severally is, that they embroil men in lawsuits and other like quarrels. Blackstone defines barratry to be the “frequently exciting and stirring up of suits and quarrels between his majesty’s subjects, either at law or otherwise”;¹⁰ maintenance, “an officious intermeddling in a suit that no way belongs to one, by maintaining or assisting either party, with money or otherwise, to prosecute or defend it”;¹¹ champerty, “a bargain with a plaintiff or defendant to divide the land or other matter sued for between them, if they prevail at law, whereupon the champertor is to carry on the party’s suit at his own expense.”¹² The sale of real estate,

D I S T R E S S.

THE remedy for recovering rent by way of distress seems not to have come over to us from the civil law. For anciently in the feudal law, the not paying attendance at the lord's court, or not doing the feudal service was a forfeiture of the estate: But these feudal forfeitures were afterwards turned into distresses, according to the pignorary method of the civil law; that is, the land that is let out to the tenant is hypothecated, or as a pledge in his hands, to answer the rent agreed to be paid to the landlord, and the whole profits arising from the land are liable to the lord's seizure for the payment and satisfaction thereof.

Concerning which we will shew,

- I. For what cause a distress shall be.*
- II. What goods may be distrained, and what not.*
- III. At what time the distress shall be taken.*
- IV. Where the distress shall be made.*
- V. That reasonable distress shall be taken.*
- VI. Manner of making distress.*
- VII. Distress how to be demeaned.*
- VIII. Of rescous and pound breach.*
- IX. Replevying the distress.*
- X. Scale of the distress.*
- XI. Irregularity in the proceedings.*
- XII. Landlord re-entering on non-payment.*
- XIII. Case of tenant holding over.*
- XIV. Rent in case of an execution.*
- XV. Rent how far recoverable by executors or administrators.*
- XVI. Of distress by warrant of justices of the peace.*

I. For what causes a distress shall be.

Distress for rent must be, for rent in arrear; therefore it may not be made on the same day on which the rent becomes due; for if the rent is paid in any part of that day, whilst a man can see to count money, the payment is good.

It must not be after tender of payment; for if the landlord comes to distrain the goods of his tenant for rent behind before the distress, the tenant may upon the land tender the arrearages, and if after that

A distress be taken, it is wrongful : And if the landlord have distrained ; if the tenant, before the impounding thereof, tender the arrears, the landlord ought to deliver the distress, and if he doth not, the detainer is unlawful. Even so it is, in case of distress for damage feasant (or damage done by cattle trespassing) the tender of amends before the distress, maketh the distress unlawful ; and after the distress, and before the impounding, the detainer unlawful.

1 Inst. 107.

But in this case, altho' the owner tender sufficient amends, yet he cannot take his beasts out of the pound, if the amends be refused ; but he must replevy : and if it be found at the trial that the amends was not sufficient, the person on whom they trespassed shall have damages ; if the amends tendered were sufficient, then the owner of the beasts shall have damages. Dr. & St. 112.

Note, there are three kinds of rents ; rent service, rent charge, and rent seck.

Rent service is, where the tenant holdeth his land of his lord, by fealty and certain rent ; or by homage, fealty, and certain rent ; or by other service, and certain rent. And it is called a rent service, because it hath some corporal service incident to it, which at the least is fealty. 1 Inst. 141, 142.

Rent charge is so called because the land for payment thereof, is charged with distress ; but before this act such distress could not be sold, but only detained till the rent should be paid. 4 G. 2. c. 28.

If the rent be reserved, without any clause put in the deed of distress for the same, then it is called a rent seck, redditus seckus, or dry rent : and the difference between a rent charge and a rent seck is, that there is a clause of distress annexed to one, and no such clause to the other ; and therefore the one is a charge upon the land, but for the other the grantee had formerly no remedy but to charge the person of the grantor in a writ of annuity. 1 Inst. 143.

Rents of assize are the certain rents of freeholders and ancient copy-holders, so called because they are assized and certain, and thereby distinguished from redditus mobiles, farm rents for life, years, or at will, which are variable and uncertain. 2 Inst. 19.

Where the agreement is not by deed, the landlord may recover a reasonable satisfaction, in an action on the case. 11 G. 2. c. 19. s. 14.

So an action of debt may be brought against a tenant for life, in pursuance of the statute of the 8 An. c. 14. which enacteth, that whereas before the said statute no action of debt did lie against a tenant for life or lives, for any arrears of rent during the continuance of such estate for life or lives ; it shall be lawful, for any person having any rent in arrear or due upon any lease or demise for life or lives, to bring an action of debt for such arrears, in like manner as he might have done in case such rent was reserved upon a lease for years. s. 4.

Persons having rent in arrear, upon any lease determined, may distress for such arrears after the determination of the lease, in the same manner as if it had not been determined ; provided that such distress be made in six months after the determination of such lease, and during the continuance of such landlord's title or interest, and during the possession of the tenant from whom such arrear became due. 8 An. c. 14. f. 6. 7.

Before the statute of the 17 C. 2. c. 7. in case a distress was too little where sufficient distress was to be had, a man could not distrain again, be the demand ever so great; for it was his folly that at first he distrained no more. Mo. 7. Comb. 546.

But now, by the said statute, in all cases where the value of the cattle distrained shall not be found to be to the full value of the arrears distrained for; the party to whom such arrears were due, his executors or administrators, may distrain again for the residue of the said arrears. f. 4.

If any distress and sale shall be made, for rent in arrear and due, when none is in truth due, the owner shall recover double value with full costs. 2. W. Sess. 1. c. 5. f. 5.

And if the distress be taken of goods without cause, the owner may make rescous; but if they be distrained without cause and impounded, the owner cannot break the pound and take them out, because they are in the custody of the law. 1 Inst. 47.

II. What goods may be distrained, and what not.

Distress for rent must be of a thing, whereof a valuable property is in somebody; and therefore, dogs, bucks, does, conies, and the like, that are fera natura, cannot be distrained. 1 Inst. 47.

Altho' it be of valuable property, as a horse; yet when a man or woman is riding on him, or an ax in a man's hand cutting of wood, and the like, they are for that time privileged, and cannot be distrained. 1 Inst. 47.

But it is said, that if one be riding upon an horse damage feasant, the horse may be led to the pound with the rider upon him. 1 Sid. 422, 440.

And it hath been held, that horses joined to a cart, with a man upon it, cannot be distrained for rent (altho' they may for damage feasant); but both cart and horses may, if the man be not upon the cart. 1 Vent. 36.

Valuable things shall not be distrained for rent, for benefit and maintenance of trades, which by consequence are for the commonwealth, and are there by authority of law: as a horse in a smith's shop shall not be distrained for the rent issuing out of the shop, nor a horse in a hoftry, nor the materials in a weaver's shop for making cloth, nor cloth or garments in a tailor's shop, nor sacks of corn or meal in a mill, nor any thing distrained for damage feasant, for it is in custody of the law; and the like. 1 Inst. 47.

Beasts belonging to the plough shall not be distrained (which is the ancient common law of England, for no man shall be distrained of the utensils or instruments of his trade or profession, as the ax of the carpenter, or the books of a scholar) while goods or other beasts may be distrained. 1 Inst. 47.

But this rule holds only in distresses for rent arrear, amercements, and the like; but doth not extend to cases, where a distress is given, in the nature of an execution, by any particular statute, as for poor rates and the like. 3 Salk. 136.

D I S T R E S S.

Furnaces, cauldrons, or other things fixed to the freehold, or the doors or windows of a house, or the like cannot be distrained. 1 Inst. 47.

Things for which a replevin will not lie, so as to be known again, as money out of a bag, cannot be distrained. 2 Bac. Abr. 109.

But money in a bag sealed may be distrained; for that the bag sealed may be known again.

By the 2 W. Jess. 1. c. 5. Persons having rent arrear on any demise. lease or contract, may seize and secure any sheaves or cocks of corn, or corn loose or in the straw, or hay being in any barn or granary, or upon any hovel, stack, or rick, or otherwise upon any part of the land charged with the rent, and may lock up or detain the same in the place where found, in the nature of a distress; so as the same be not removed to the damage of the owner, out of the place where found and seized, but be kept there (as impound) till replevied or sold. f. 3.

Where a stranger's beasts escape into the land, they may be distrained for rent, tho' they have not been levant and couchant (that is, tho' they have not been in the ground for a good space of time, or so long as to have laid down and rose up again to feed) provided they are trespassers: But if the tenant of the land is in default, in not repairing his fences, whereby the beasts came into the land, the lessor cannot distrain such beasts, tho' they have been levant and couchant, unless he have given notice to the owner, and he suffer them to remain there afterwards. Lutw. 364.

In case of rent reserved upon a lease for years, the lessor cannot distrain such cattle, until they be levant and couchant; for if the lessor had had the lands in his own hands, he ought to have repaired the fences; and when he puts in a lessee, he ought by covenant to oblige him to repair: and therefore in that case, if the law would allow the lessor to distrain the cattle of a stranger which come in by escape, before that they be levant and couchant, it would be in effect to allow a man to take advantage of his own wrong. Therefore if the cattle come in by default of the owner of the cattle, then they may be distrained before they be levant and couchant; but if in default of the tenant of the land, there they cannot be distrained until they have been levant and couchant, that is to say, for rent upon leases for years. And in such case, the lessor shall not take the cattle before that he has given notice to the owner, that they are upon the land liable to his distress; and if he doth not come to take them away, then they become distrainable. And by Treby chief justice; Where the cattle escape accidentally, there they are not distrainable, until they have been levant and couchant; but if they escape by default of their owner, they are distrainable the first minute. L. Raym. 168, 9.

If ten head of cattle are doing damage, a man cannot take one of them and keep it till he be satisfied for the whole damage; but he may bring an action of trespass for the rest. 12 Mod. 660. H. 13 W. Vasper and Edwards.

If a man hath common for ten cattle, and he puts in more; the surplussage above ten may be taken damage feasant. 1 Roll's Abr. 665.

If a man come to distrain, and see the beasts in his ground, and the owner chase them out, of purpose before the distress taken; yet the owner of the soil cannot distrain them, and if he doth the owner of the cattle may rescue them, for the beasts must be damage feasant at the time of the distress. 1 Inst. 161.

For the distress damage feasant is the strictest distress that is; and the thing distrained must be taken in the very act; for if the goods are once off, tho' on fresh pursuit, the owner of the ground cannot take them. 12 Mod. 661.

III. At what time the distress shall be taken.

For a rent or service the lord cannot distrain in the night, but in the day time; and so it is of a rent charge; but for damage feasant, one may distrain in the night, otherwise it may be, the beasts will be gone before he can take them. 1 Inst. 142.

For before sun rising, or after sun set, no man may distrain but for damage feasant. Mirour c. 2. f. 26.

IV. Where the distress shall be made.

The king's officers, as sheriffs and others, shall not take distresses in the fees wherewith churches in times past have been endowed; but distresses may be taken in possessions of the church newly purchased. 9 Ed. 2. c. 9.

A man may distrain in places or lands within the fee, liable to distress, and not elsewhere. 52 H. 3. c. 15. 2 Inst. 131. Mir. c. 2. f. 26.

And by the 11 G. 2. c. 19. The landlord may distrain any cattle or stock of the tenant, depasturing on any common appendant or appurtenant, or any ways belonging to the premises demised. f. 8.

No person (except the king's officers) shall take distresses in the king's highway. 52 H. 3. c. 15.

And the reason is, because the king's subjects ought to have free passage, as well to fairs and markets, as about their other affairs. But yet this shall not be taken, to make the distress utterly unlawful, so as to take advantage thereof in bar to an avowry, but to this purpose that if the lord distrain in the highway, the tenant may have an action against him upon this statute. 2 Inst. 131, 132.

But by the 11 G. 2. c. 19. If any tenant for life, years, at will, sufferance, or otherwise, shall fraudulently or clandestinely convey off the premises, his goods or chattels, to prevent the landlord from distraining; such landlord, or any person by him lawfully empowered, may in 30 days next after such conveying away, seize the same wherever they shall be found, and dispose of them in such manner, as if they had been distrained on the premises. f. 1.

But no landlord shall distrain any goods sold bona fide, and for a valuable consideration, before such seizure made, to any person not privy to such fraud. f. 2.

And if any tenant shall so fraudulently remove and convey away his goods or chattels, or if any person or persons shall wilfully and knowingly aid or assist him in such fraudulent conveying away or carrying

Nor may the lessor enter into the tenant's house, unless the doors are open. Read. Distr. 2 Bac. Abr. 111.

Upon a question about taking a distress, it was held by the lord chief justice Hardwicke, at the summer assizes at Exeter, 1735, that a padlock put upon a barn door could not be opened by force, to take the corn by way of distress. Vin. Distr. (E. 2.) 6.

Where any goods or chattels fraudulently or clandestinely conveyed or carried away, shall be put, placed, or kept in any house, barn, stable, outhouse, yard, close, or place, locked up, fastened, or otherwise secured, so as to prevent such goods or chattels from being taken and seized as a distress for arrears of rent; it shall be lawful for the landlord, or his steward, bailiff, receiver, or other person or persons empowered, to take and seize, as a distress for rent, such goods and chattels (first calling to his assistance the constable, of the district, or place, where the same shall be suspected to be concealed, and in case of a dwelling house, oath being also first made before a justice of the peace, of a reasonable ground to suspect that such goods or chattels are therein) in the day time to break open and enter into such house, barn, stable, outhouse, yard, close, and place; and to take and seize such goods and chattels for the said arrears of rent, as he might have done if they had been in any open place. 11 G. 2. c. 19. s. 7.

But except it be in this case where the goods are clandestinely conveyed, it may seem from what hath been said, that the landlord hath no mean to come at the goods in order to make distress, if the tenant shall think fit to lock up his gates, and shut the doors: And the like may be observed in cases of distress for the levying a penalty, by warrant of justices of the peace. Which matter may seem to require some consideration.

If a landlord comes into a house, and seizes upon some goods as a distress in the name of all the goods of the house; that will be a good seizure of all. 6 Mod. 215.

VII. Distress how to be demeaned.

By the 52 H. 3. c. 4. None shall cause any distress that he hath taken, to be driven out of the county where it was taken: and if one neighbour do so to another of his own authority (as for damage feasant, or rent charge, 2 Inst. 106.) he shall make fine as for a thing done against the peace; and if the lord so presume to do against his tenant, he shall be grievously punished by amercement.

Before this act, at the common law, a man might have driven the distress to what county he pleased: which was mischievous, for two causes; 1. Because the tenant was bound to give the beasts being impounded in an open pound sustenance, and being carried into another county, by common intendment he could have no knowledge where they were. 2. He could not know where to have a replevy; but the party was, before this statute driven to his action upon the case. 2 Inst. 106.

And albeit this statute be in the negative, yet if the tenancy be in one county, and the manor in another county, the lord may drive the distress which he taketh in the tenancy to his manor in the other states, resident therein, who is or shall be of the age of eighteen years, and under the age of forty-five years (except as is herein after excepted) shall severally and respectively be enrolled in the militia by the captain or commanding officer of the company, within whose bounds such citizen shall reside, and that within twelve months after the passing of this act. And it shall at all times hereafter be the duty of every such captain or commanding officer of a company to enrol every such citizen, as aforesaid, and also those who shall from time to time, arrive at the age of eighteen years or being of the age of eighteen years and under the age of forty five years (except as before excepted) shall come to reside within his bounds; and shall without delay notify such citizen of the said enrolment, by a proper non-commissioned officer of the company, by whom such notice may be proved. That every citizen so enrolled and notified, shall, within six months thereafter, provide himself with a good musket or firelock, a sufficient bayonet and belt, two spare flints, and a knapsack, a pouch with a box therein to contain not less than twenty four cartridges, suited to the bore of his musket or firelock, each cartridge to contain a proper quantity of powder and ball: or with a good rifle, knapsack, shotpouch and powder-horn, twenty-balls suited to the bore of his rifle, and a quarter of a pound of powder; and shall appear, so armed, accoutred and provided, when called out to exercise, or into service, except, that when called out on company-days to exercise only, he may appear without a knapsack. That the commissioned officers shall severally be armed with a sword or hanger and esponton, and that from and after five years from the passing of this act, all muskets for arming the militia as herein required, shall be of bores sufficient for balls of the eighteenth part of a pound. And every citizen so enrolled, and providing himself with the arms, ammunition and accoutrements required, as aforesaid, shall hold the same exempted from all suits, distresses, executions or sales, for debt or for the payment of taxes.

II. And be it further enacted, That the Vice President of the United States; the officers, judicial and executive of the government of the United States; the members of both houses of Congress, and their respective officers; all custom-house officers with their clerks; all post officers, and stage drivers, who are employed in the care and conveyance of the mail of the post-office of the United States; all ferrymen employed at any ferry on the post road; all inspectors of exports; all pilots; all mariners actually employed in the sea service of any citizen or merchant within the United States; and all persons who now are or may hereafter be exempted by the laws of the respective states, shall be, and are hereby exempted from militia duty, notwithstanding their being above the age of eighteen, and under the age of forty-five years.

III. And be it further enacted, That within one year after the passing of this act, the militia of the respective states shall be arranged into divisions, brigades, regiments, battalions and companies, as the legislature of each state shall direct; and each division, brigade, and regiment, shall be numbered at the formation thereof; and a record made of such numbers in the adjutant-general's office in the SECTION 1. The judge of the criminal court, or any judge of the circuit court, in vacation as well as in term, and also all justices of the peace, shall have power to cause all laws made for the preservation of the public peace to be kept, and, in the execution of that power, may require persons to give security to keep the peace, or for their good behavior, or both, in the manner provided in this chapter.

SEC. 2. Whenever complaint shall be made to any such magistrate that any person has threatened to commit an offence against the person or property of another, the magistrate shall examine the complainant, and any witness who may be produced, on oath, and reduce such complaint to writing, and cause the same to be subscribed by the complainant. A wife may pray surety of the peace against her husband, or anybody else may pray such surety, in her behalf, against him, and such person shall, in such proceeding, be deemed the complaining witness.

SEC. 3. If, upon examination, it shall appear that such affidavit is made only to secure the protection of the law, and not from anger or malice, and that there is just cause to fear that any such offence may be committed, the magistrate shall issue a warrant under his hand, reciting the substance of the complaint, and requiring the officer to whom it may be directed forthwith to apprehend the person complained of and bring him before such magistrate, or some other magistrate or court having jurisdiction of the cause.

SEC. 4. When the party complained of is brought before the magistrate, he shall be heard in his defence, and he may be required to enter into a recognizance, with sufficient sureties, in such sum as the magistrate shall direct, to keep the peace towards all the people of this District, and especially towards the person requiring such security, for such term as the magistrate may order, not exceeding one year, but shall not be bound over to the next court, unless he is also charged with some other offence for which he ought to be held to answer at such court.

SEC. 5. Upon complying with the order of the magistrate, the party complained of shall be discharged.

SEC. 6. If the person so ordered to recognise shall refuse or neglect to comply with such order, the magistrate shall commit him to the county jail during the period for which he was required to give security, or until he shall so recognise; stating in the warrant the cause of commitment, with the sum and the time for which security was required.

SEC. 7. If, upon examination, it shall not appear that there is just cause to fear that any such offence will be committed by the party complained of, he shall be forthwith discharged; and if the magistrate shall deem the complaint unfounded, frivolous, or malicious, he shall order the complainant to pay the costs of prosecution, who shall thereupon be answerable to the magistrate and the officer for their fees as for his own debt.

SEC. 8. When no order respecting the costs is made by the magistrate, they shall be allowed and paid in the same manner as costs before justices in criminal prosecution; but in all cases where a person is required to give security for the peace, or for his good behavior, the court or magistrate may further order that the costs of prosecution, or any part thereof, shall be paid by such person, who shall stand committed until such costs are paid, or he is otherwise legally discharged.

SEC. 9. Any person aggrieved by the order of any justice of the peace requiring him to recognise as aforesaid, may, on giving the security required, appeal to the criminal court at its next session to be discharged therefrom.

SEC. 10. The magistrate from whose order an appeal is so taken shall require such witnesses as he may think necessary to support the complaint, to recognise for their appearance at the court to which the appeal is made.

SEC. 11. The criminal court may affirm the order of the justice or discharge the appellant, or may require the appellant to enter into a new recognizance, with sufficient sureties, in such sum and for such time as the court shall think proper, and may also make such order in relation to the costs of prosecution as may be deemed just and reasonable.

SEC. 12. If any party appealing shall fail to prosecute his appeal, his recognizance shall remain in full force and effect, as to any breach of the condition, without an affirmation of the judgment or order of the magistrate, and shall also stand as a security for any costs which shall be ordered by the court appealed to, to be paid by the appellant.

SEC. 13. Any person committed for not finding sureties, or refusing to recognise, as required by the court or magistrate, may be discharged by any judge or justice of the peace on giving such security as was required.

SEC. 14. Every recognizance taken pursuant to the foregoing provisions shall be transmitted by the magistrate to the criminal court on or before the first day of the next term, and shall be there filed by the clerk.

SEC. 15. Every person who shall, in the presence of any officer mentioned in the first section of this chapter, make an affray, or threaten to kill or beat another, or to commit any violence or outrage against his person or property, and every person who, in the presence of such officer, shall contend with hot and angry words, to the disturbance of the peace, may be ordered, without process or any other proof, to recognise for keeping the peace, or being of good behavior, for a term not exceeding one year, and in case of refusal may be committed as before directed.

SEC. 16. If any person shall go armed with a dirk, dagger, sword, pistol, or other offensive and dangerous weapon, without reasonable cause to fear an assault or other injury or violence to his person, or to his family or property, he may, on complaint of any person having reasonable cause to fear an injury or breach of the peace, be required to find sureties for keeping the peace for a term not exceeding six months, with the right of appealing as before provided.

SEC. 17. If any justice of the peace suspect any person of selling, by retail, wine or ardent spirits, or a mixture thereof, contrary to law, he shall summon the person and such witnesses as he may think proper, to appear before him ; and, upon such person appearing, or failing to appear, if the justice, on examining the witnesses on oath, find sufficient cause, he shall inform the district attorney, or other proper officer, that a prosecution or suit may be instituted, and shall recognise the material witnesses to appear at the next term of the court before which the case is heard. Such justice may also require the person suspected to enter into a recognizance to keep the peace and be of good behavior for any time not exceeding one year. If such recognizance be given, the condition thereof shall be deemed to be broken if, during the period for which it is given, such person shall sell, by retail, wine or ardent spirits, or a mixture thereof, contrary to law.

SEC. 18. Any surety in a recognizance to keep the peace, or for good behavior, or both, shall have authority and right to take and surrender his principal, and, upon such surrender, shall be discharged and exempt from all liability for any act of the principal, subsequent to such surrender, which would be a breach of the condition of the recognizance. Such person may recognise anew, with sufficient sureties, before any justice of the peace, for the residue of the term, and be thereupon discharged.

SEARCH WARRANTS.

SEC. 19. When complaint shall be made on oath to any magistrate authorized to issue warrants in criminal cases, that personal property has been stolen or embezzled, or obtained by false tokens or pretences, and that the complainant believes that it is concealed in any particular house or place, the magistrate, if he be satisfied that there is reasonable cause for such belief, shall issue a warrant to search for such property.

SEC. 20. Any such magistrate may also, upon a like complaint made on oath, issue search warrants, when satisfied that there is reasonable cause, in the following cases, to wit :

First, to search for and seize any counterfeit or spurious coin, forged bank notes, and other forged instruments, or any tools, machines, or materials, prepared or provided for making either of them ;

Secondly, to search for and seize any books pamphlets, ballads, printed papers, or other things containing obscene language, or obscene prints, pictures, figures, or descriptions, manifestly tending refusing to recognize, as required by the court or magistrate, may be discharged by any judge or justice of the peace, on giving such security, as was required. CHAP. 169.

SECT. 14. Every recognizance, taken pursuant to the foregoing provisions, shall be transmitted to the district court, on or before the first day of the next ensuing term, and shall there be filed by the clerk, as of record. may be taken after commitment. Return of such recognizance.

SECT. 15. Whoever, in the presence of any magistrate, mentioned in the second section of this chapter, or before any court of record, shall make any affray or threaten to kill or beat another, or commit any violence against his person or property, or shall contend, with hot and angry words, to the disturbance of the peace, may be ordered, without process or any other proof, to recognize for keeping the peace, or being of the good behavior for a term, not exceeding three months, and, in case of refusal, may be committed to prison as before directed. When magistrate may require sureties, without a formal complaint, &c.

SECT. 16. Any person, going armed with any dirk, dagger, sword, pistol, or other offensive and dangerous weapon, without a reasonable cause to fear an assault on himself, or any of his family or property, may, on the complaint of any person having cause to fear an injury or breach of the peace, be required to find sureties for keeping the peace for a term, not exceeding one year, with the right of appeal as before provided. Persons going armed, without reasonable cause. 1821, 76, § 1.

SECT. 17. In a suit, on such recognizance taken in a criminal case, if a forfeiture is found or confessed, the court, on petition, may remit the penalty, or such part of it as they may think proper, on such terms as they may think right. Power of court, to remit the penalty of a recognizance. 1821, 50, § 4.

SECT. 18. Any surety in a recognizance may surrender the principal in the same manner, as if he had been his bail in a civil cause, and, on such surrender, shall be discharged from all liability for any act of the principal after such surrender, which would be a breach of the recognizance; and, upon such surrender, the principal may recognize anew with sufficient surety or sureties for the residue of the term, before any justice of the peace, and shall thereupon be discharged. Sureties on recognizances may surrender their principals as in case of bail in civil actions.

Acts and Laws,

Passed by the GENERAL COURT of Massachusetts :

Begun and held at BOSTON, in the County of SUFFOLK, on Wednesday the Twenty-ninth Day of MAY, ANNO DOMINI, 1793.

C H A P. I.

An Act for regulating and governing the Militia of the Commonwealth of Massachusetts, and for repealing all Laws heretofore made for that Purpose ; excepting an Act, intituled " An Act for establishing Rules and Articles for governing the Troops stationed in Forts and Garrisons, within this Commonwealth, and also the Militia, when called into actual Service."

WHEREAS the Laws for regulating and governing the Militia of this Commonwealth, have become too complicated for practical use, by reason of the several alterations which have from time to time been made therein : Preamble.

Therefore,

I. BE it enacted by the SENATE and HOUSE of REPRESENTATIVES in General Court assembled, and by the authority of the same, That the several Laws heretofore made for governing and regulating Laws repealed.

1. The judges of the supreme court, of the court of oyer and terminer and jail delivery, of the courts of quarter sessions, or any of them, shall and may direct their writs and precepts to the sheriffs and coroners of the several counties within this commonwealth, when need shall be, to take persons indicted for felonies, or other offences, before them, who may dwell, remove or be received into another county; and it shall and may be lawful to and for the said judges, or any of them, to issue subpoenas into any county of the commonwealth, for summoning and bringing any person to give evidence in any matter or cause before them, or any of them, and to compel obedience to such writs, precepts or subpoenas, by attachment or otherwise, and under such pains and penalties as other writs or subpoenas are or ought by law to be granted and awarded; (a) and that it shall be lawful for said judges, or any of them, if they see fit to direct such writ, precept, summons, subpoena or attachments, to be executed by the sheriff of the county in which the same is awarded, which said writ, precept, summons or subpoena, shall be the sufficient warrant of such sheriff for executing the same throughout this commonwealth, as fully and effectually as if directed to and executed by the sheriff of the proper county where issued: Provided, That the reasonable expenses of executing such process, when issued on behalf of the commonwealth, shall be paid out of the funds of the county where issued; and the expenses of removing any person charged with having committed an offence in one county into another county, or of transporting any person charged with having committed any offence in this state from another state into this state for trial, or for conveying any person, after conviction, to the penitentiary, shall be paid out of the treasury of the county where the offence is charged to have been committed (b)

2. Where any person charged with having committed any felony(c) in any city or county of this commonwealth, shall go or escape into any other county thereof, it shall and may be lawful for the president, or any judge of the court of common pleas in the county where the said person may be found, to issue his warrant, authorizing and requiring the sheriff of the said county, to take the said person and conduct him to the proper county, where the said felony is alleged to have been committed; the expenses of which shall be paid to the said sheriff by the county to which the said person is conducted.(d)

3. In case any person, against whom a warrant may be issued by any judge or alderman of any city, or justice of the peace of any county in this commonwealth, for any offence there committed, shall escape, go into, reside or be in any other city or county out of the jurisdiction of the judge, alderman, justice or justices of the city or county granting such warrant as aforesaid, it shall and may be lawful for, and it is hereby declared to be the duty of any alderman, justice or justices of the city or county where such person shall escape, go into, reside or be, upon proof being made, upon oath or affirmation, of the handwriting of the judge, alderman, justice or justices granting such warrant, to indorse his or their name or names on such warrant, which shall be sufficient authority to the person or persons bringing such warrant, and to all other persons to whom such warrant was originally directed, to execute the same in such other city or county, out of the jurisdiction of the alderman, justice or justices, granting such warrant as aforesaid, and to apprehend and carry such offender before the alderman, justice or justices who indorsed such warrant, or some other alderman, justice or justices of such other city and county where such warrant was indorsed. And in case the offence for which such offender shall be so apprehended, shall be bailable in law by an alderman or justice of the peace, and such offender shall be willing and ready to give bail for his appearance at the next court of general jail delivery or quarter sessions, to be held in and for the city and county where the offence was commit-

(a) Justices of the peace were empowered, by the 8th section of the act of 22 May 1722, to issue subpoenas and other warrants, into any county or place, within the province, for summoning or bringing any person or persons to give evidence in and upon any matter or cause whatsoever, examinable or triable by or before them, under such pains or penalties as subpoenas or warrants of that kind usually are or ought by law to be granted or awarded. 1 Sm. 138. This section is one of those repealed, as to criminal proceedings, by the act of 1860 § 79. This would appear to take away the power of justices to issue subpoenas and attachments into other counties.

(b) This section is composed of the 8th section of the act of 22 May 1722, 1 Sm. 138; of the 14th section of the act of 23 September 1791, 3 Sm. 43; and of the 2d section of the act of 25 April 1846. P. L. 406. It is not proposed to repeal all the 8th section of the act of 1722, because part of it equally applies to civil as well as criminal proceedings. Report on the Penal Code 39. The county is not liable for the expenses incurred in an unsuccessful attempt to arrest a fugitive from justice, who has taken refuge in another state. Andrus v. Warren County, 32 Penn. St. R. 540.

(c) This does not extend to misdemeanors; a fugitive charged with having committed a misdemeanor in another county, can only be arrested under the provisions of the succeeding section. Boyd's Case, 1 Gr. 218.

ted, such alderman, justice or justices shall and may take such bail for his appearance, in the same manner as the alderman or justice of the peace of the proper city or county might have done; and the said alderman, justice or justices of the peace of such other city or county so taking bail, shall deliver or transmit such recognisance and other proceeding to the clerk of the court of general jail delivery or quarter sessions, where such offender is required to appear by virtue of such recognisance; and such recognisance and other proceedings shall be as good and effectual in law, as if the same had been entered into, taken or acknowledged in the proper county where the offence was committed, and the same proceedings shall be had therein. And in case the offence for which such offender shall be apprehended in any other city or county, shall not be bailable in law by an alderman or justice of the peace, or such offender shall not give bail for his appearance at the proper court having cognisance of his crime, to the satisfaction of the alderman or justice before whom he shall be brought, then the constable or other person so apprehending such offender, shall carry and convey him before one of the aldermen or justices of the peace of the proper city or county where such offence was committed, there to be dealt with according to law (a)

Magistrates backing such warrants to be indemnified.

5. When any person shall be accused before a magistrate, upon oath or affirmation, of the crime of burglary, robbery or larceny, and the said magistrate shall have issued his warrant to apprehend such person or persons, or to search for such goods as have been described, on oath or affirmation, to have been stolen goods, if any shall be found in the custody or possession of such person or persons, or in the custody or possession of any other person or persons, for his, her or their use, and there is probable cause, supported by oath or affirmation, to suspect that other goods, which may be discovered on such search, are stolen, it shall and may be lawful for the said magistrate, to direct the said goods to be seized, and to secure the same in his own custody, unless the person in whose possession the same were found, shall give sufficient surety to produce the same at the time of his or her trial. And the said magistrate shall forthwith cause an inventory to be taken of the said goods, and shall file the same with the clerk of that court in which the accused person is intended to be prosecuted, and shall give public notice in the newspapers, or otherwise, by advertising the same in three or more public places in the city or county where the offence is charged to have been committed, before the time of trial, noting in such advertisement the said inventory, the person charged, and time of trial. And if, on such trial, the accused party shall be acquitted, and no other claimant shall appear or suit be commenced, then, at the expiration of three months, such goods shall be delivered to the party accused, and he, she or they shall be discharged, and the county be liable to the costs of prosecution; but if he be convicted of larceny only, and after restitution made to the owner and the sentence of the court being fully complied with, shall claim a right in the residue of the said goods, and no other shall appear or claim the said goods, or any part of them, then it shall be lawful, notwithstanding the claim of the said party accused, to detain such goods for the term of nine months, to the end that all persons having any claim thereto may have full opportunity to come, and to the satisfaction of the court, prove their property in them; on which proof, the said owner or owners, respectively, shall receive the said goods, or the value thereof, if, from their perishable nature, it shall have been found necessary to make sale thereof, upon paying the reasonable charges incurred by the securing the said goods and establishing their property in the same; but if no such claim shall be brought and duly supported, then the person so convicted shall be entitled to the remainder of the said goods, or the value thereof, in case the same shall have been sold agreeably to the original inventory. But if, upon an attainer of burglary or robbery, the court shall, after due inquiry, be of opinion that the said goods were not the property of such burglar or robber, they shall be delivered, together with a certified copy of the said inventory, to the

 Surety of the peace.
 6. If any person shall threaten the person of another to wound, kill or destroy him, or to do him any harm in person or estate, (b) and the person threatened shall appear before a justice of the peace, and attest, on oath or affirmation, that he believes that, by such threatening, he is in danger of being hurt in body or estate, such person so threatening as aforesaid, shall be bound over, with one sufficient surety, to appear at the next sessions, (c) according to law, and in the meantime to be of his good behavior, and keep the peace toward all citizens of this commonwealth. (d) If any person, not being an officer on duty in the military or naval service of the state or of the United States, shall go armed with a dirk, dagger, sword or pistol, or other offensive or dangerous weapon, without reasonable cause to fear an assault or other injury or violence to his family, person or property, he may, on complaint of any person having reasonable cause to fear a breach of the peace therefrom, be required to find surety of the peace as aforesaid. Ibid. § 7.
 Bail.
 7. In all cases, the party accused, on oath or affirmation, of any crime or misdemeanor against the laws, shall be admitted to bail by one or more sufficient sureties, to be taken before any judge, justice, mayor, recorder or alderman where the offence charged has been committed, except such persons as are precluded from being bailed by the constitution of this commonwealth: (g) Provided also, That persons accused as aforesaid of murder or manslaughter, shall only be admitted to bail by the supreme court or one of the judges thereof, or a president or associate law judge of a court of common pleas: persons accused, as aforesaid, of arson, rape, mayhem, sodomy, buggery, robbery or burglary, shall only be bailable by the supreme court, the court of common pleas, or any of the judges thereof, or a mayor or recorder of a city. Ibid. § 8.
 Surrender of bail.
 8. All sureties, mainpernors, and bail in criminal cases, whether bound in recognisances for a particular matter, or for all charges whatsoever, shall be entitled to have a bail-piece, duly certified by the proper officer or person before whom or in whose office the recognisance of such surety, mainpernors or bail shall be or remain, and upon such bail-piece, by themselves, or their agents, to arrest and detain, and surrender their principals, with the like effect as in cases of bail in civil actions; (i) and such bail-piece shall be a sufficient warrant or authority for the proper sheriff or jailer to receive the said principal, and have him forthcoming to answer the matter or matters alleged against him: Provided, That nothing herein contained shall prevent the person thus arrested and detained from giving new bail or sureties for his appearance, who shall have the same right of surrender hereinbefore provided. 9. In all cases where a person shall, on the complaint of another, be bound by recognisance to appear, or shall, for want of security, be committed, or shall be indicted for an assault and battery or other misdemeanor, to the injury and damage of the party complaining, and not charged to have been done with intent to commit a felony, or not being an infamous crime, and for which there shall also be a remedy, by action, if the party complaining shall appear before the magistrate who may have taken recognisance, or made the commitment, or before the court in which the indictment shall be, and acknowledge to have received satisfaction for such injury and damage, it shall be lawful for the magistrate, in his discretion, to discharge the recognisance, which may have been taken for the appearance of the defendant, or in case of committal, to discharge the prisoner, or for the court also where such proceeding has been returned to the court, in their discretion, to order a nolle prosequi to be entered on the indictment, as the case may require, upon payment of costs: Provided, That this act shall not extend to any assault and battery, or other misdemeanor, committed by or on any officer or minister of justice.(a)

Formal objections to indictments.

Amendments on demurrer, &c.

(a) This section is an extension of the existing law of the 17 March 1866, 4 Sm. 318. Report on the Penal Code 40.

(b) The title of this act refers only to Crawford county, but the enactment is general. The 3d section of the act 13 April 1867, P. L. 1232, relating to the jurisdiction of justices of the peace in Erie county, provides that in all cases of arrest, upon warrant, of any person charged with any crime of a grade of which the quarter sessions has jurisdiction, the defendant, upon the preliminary hearing before the magistrate, may subpoena and produce and examine witnesses in his or her behalf. This section is not, in terms, restricted to Erie county: quere whether it is a general law?

(c) This is taken from the 1st section of the act 5 April 1826, 9 Sm. 136. That witnesses, whose names had not been marked by the district-attorney on the bill of indictment, were sworn and examined by the foreman of the grand jury, is not pleadable in bar; at most, it is only ground for a motion to quash. Tillard v. Commonwealth, 13 Leg. Int. 132.

(e) A substantial defect is not cured by this section. Commonwealth v. Hill, 4 Luz. Leg. Obs. 54. Phillips v. Commonwealth, 44 Penn. St. R. 197. See Fleming v. People, 27 N. Y. 329.

(g) Formal defects must be taken advantage of, before the jury is sworn. Phillips v. Commonwealth, 44 Penn. St. R. 197. Afterwards, the indictment cannot be quashed, or the judgment arrested. Commonwealth v. Frey, 50 Penn.

St. R. 245. This clause does not prevent the defendant from demurring. Commonwealth v. Galbraith, 6 Phila. 281. And see Commonwealth v. France, 2 Brewst. 568.

(h) As to what defects are amendable, see Commonwealth v. O'Brien, 2 Brewst. 566. Commonwealth v. Seymour, Ibid. 567. Commonwealth v. Lenoir, 3 Brewst. 249. Commonwealth v. Kaas, Ibid. 422. Commonwealth v. Harris, 3 Leg. Gaz. 306.

(i) Sections 11 to 22 are all new, and are, certainly, not the least important in the proposed amendments of our penal system. The history of criminal administration abounds with instances in which the guilty have escaped, by reason of the apparently unreasonable nicety required in indictments. Lord HALZ, one of the best, and most humane of English judges, long since remarked, that such niceties were "grown to be a blemish and an inconvenience in the law, and the administration thereof; that more offenders escaped by the easy ear given to exceptions to indictments, than by the manifestations of their innocence, and that the grossest crimes had gone unpunished, by reason of these unseemly niceties." The reason for recognizing these subtilities, by the common law, no doubt, arose from the humanity of the judges, who, in administering a system in which the punishment of death followed almost every conviction of felony, were naturally disposed, in favor of life, to hold the crown to the strictest rules. Since, however, the reform of the penal laws, and the just apportionment of punishment to crimes, according to their intrinsic atrocity and danger, the reason which led to the adoption of these technical niceties has ceased, and with the cessation of the reason, the technicalities themselves should be expunged from our system. The 11th section of this act proposes what the commissioners believe will acts of violence and blood, committed in the streets of our most populous cities, where we should expect to witness the greatest proofs of civilization? In our own Commonwealth, no person may go armed with a dirk, dagger, sword, pistol, or other offensive and dangerous weapon, without reasonable cause to apprehend an assault or violence to his person, family, or property.* Where the practice of wearing secret arms prevails, it indicates either that the laws are bad; or that they are not executed with vigor; or, at least, it proves want of confidence in their protection. It often leads to the sudden commission of acts of atrocious injury; and induces the individual to rely for defence on himself, rather than on society. But how vain and impotent is the power of a single arm, however skilled in the science of defence, to protect its possessor from the many evil persons who infest society. The possession of a concealed dagger is apt to produce an elation of mind, which raises itself above the dictates both of prudence and law. The possessor, stimulated by a sensitive notion of honor, and constituting himself the sole judge of his rights, may suddenly commit a deed; for which a life of penitence will hardly, even in his own estimation, atone. When you survey the society to which you belong, and consider the various wants of its members;—their numbers, their variety of occupation and character,—their conflicting interests and wants,—the multitudes who are idle and unwilling to labor, or who are poor and dependent, and cannot labor,—how many live by vice and plunder, and how many derive a revenue from the arts of deceit and corruption;—what is it, permit me to ask, preserves the common peace and safety? I know of no answer, but

SECTION 18. If any person shall go armed with a dirk, dagger, sword, pistol or pistols, or other offensive and dangerous weapon, without reasonable cause to fear an assault or other injury or violence to his person, or to his family or property, he may, on complaint of any other person having reasonable cause to fear an injury or breach of the peace, be required to find sureties for keeping the peace, for a term not exceeding six months, with the right of appealing as before provided.

CHAP. 17C.
Persons going armed to give security, &c.

SECTION 19. Whenever, upon an action brought on any such recognizance, the penalty thereof shall be adjudged forfeited, the court may remit such portion of the penalty, on the petition of any defendant, as the circumstances of the case shall render just and reasonable.

Court may remit penalty.

SECTION 20. Any surety in a recognizance to keep the peace, or for good behavior, or both, shall have the same authority and right to take and surrender his principal, as if he had been bail for him in a civil cause, and upon such surrender, shall be discharged and exempt from all liability for any act of the principal subsequent to such surrender, which would be a breach of the condition of the recognizance, and the person so surrendered may recognize anew, with sufficient sureties, before any justice of the peace, for the residue of the term, and thereupon shall be discharged.

Surety may surrender principal.

SECTION 21. If any magistrate or officer mentioned in the first section of this chapter, shall have any knowledge that any assault and battery is about to be committed, or that any affray is about to occur, he shall forthwith issue a warrant and proceed as is directed when complaint has been made; and if any such offense is committed, threatened, or attempted in his presence, he shall immediately arrest the offender, or cause it to be done, and for this purpose no warrant or process shall be necessary, but the officer may summon to his assistance any sheriff, coroner, or constable, and all other persons there present, whose duty it shall be to aid the officer in preserving the peace, arresting and securing the offenders, and all such as obstruct or prevent the officer or any of his assistants in the performance of their duty, and any person who shall, when summoned to aid in arresting and securing an offender, refuse to give such assistance, shall forfeit the sum of five dollars.

When justice, &c., to issue warrant on his own knowledge.

CHAPTER CLXXVI.

OF THE ARREST AND EXAMINATION OF OFFENDERS, COMMITMENT FOR TRIAL, AND TAKING BAIL.

SECTION 1. For the apprehension of persons charged with offenses, the judges of the several courts of record, in vacation as well as term time, court commissioners, and all justices of the peace, are authorized to issue process to carry into effect the provisions of this statute.

Officer empowered to enforce provisions of this chapter.

SECTION 2. Upon complaint made to any such magistrate, Complaint
